Introduction

Why do we have brand guidelines?

Consistently branded communications establish a cohesive and established reputation, create a point of difference with competitors, and attract new signatory members and partners. Having a unified, professional brand and visual identity will enable us to build deeper relationships between the United Nations (UN), business schools and other key actors to achieve the impact that multi-stakeholder partnerships can create.

Put simply, strong communications are fundamental to achieving our mission. The biggest advantage to having brand guidelines is organizational recognition. With recognition comes familiarity. With familiarity comes trust and confidence. If done correctly, consistency brings clarity and purpose that audiences recognize. By keeping our visual identity and branding consistent, we are able to effectively develop and strengthen our brand, ensuring we make a strong, positive and long-lasting impression. While communications can—and should—be tailored according to channels, audiences and markets, it is imperative that all communications sit within the parameters of these brand guidelines as part of our larger PRME Communication Strategy.

Who are these guidelines for?

These brand guidelines are designed for use by the PRME Secretariat, and wider PRME Community, including PRME Chapters, PRME Working Groups, PRME Champions, and PRME Students, as well as external entities referring to the Principles for Responsible Management Education where appropriate. The PRME brand should not be imitated by any other entity, including Signatory Members and partners of the organization.

Official Boilerplate Text

Boilerplate text briefly summarizes an organization and can be repurposed in multiple contexts without changes. The PRME boilerplate text is often added to the end of press releases or the back cover of publications. PRME Chapters are encouraged to develop boilerplate text that is unique to their Chapter to demonstrate their contextual goals, how many Signatory Members they have, and how long they have been operating.

When possible, it is recommended to use the full boilerplate text, however a medium-length and one-line version are also available for when space does not allow for the full length.

How We Talk About Ourselves

Nomenclature

The first time our organization is mentioned, the full name should be used: “Principles for Responsible Management Education (PRME)” accompanied by the article “the” beforehand. Thereafter, “PRME” is recommended and the article “the” should not be used with it.

Examples:

The Principles for Responsible Management Education (PRME) is the largest organised relationship between the United Nations and management-related higher education institutions.

PRME is the largest organised relationship between the United Nations and management-related higher education institutions.

While PRME is a sister initiative of the UN Global Compact, PRME should always be referred to by its own name. When there is a need to demonstrate the connection between PRME and the UN Global Compact, PRME should be referred to as either “an initiative of the UN Global Compact” or a “sister initiative of the UN Global Compact.”

PRME is not to be referred to as “UN PRME” except in its website domain and affiliated email addresses. PRME’s logos showcase PRME’s affiliation with the UN by spelling out “an initiative of the UN Global Compact”. The UN Global Compact logo, UN logo, and UN name should not be used by anyone outside of the PRME Secretariat.

PRME Chapters

PRME has regional chapters that support context-specific opportunities, challenges and expectations. Chapters should each be referred to by their country- or region-specific name (as expressed in each Chapter’s Memorandum of Understanding) — for example, “PRME Chapter Africa.”

While the full Chapter name (PRME Chapter Africa) should always be used in the first instance, other shorthand versions that are acceptable in subsequent instances include “Chapter Africa” and the “African Chapter.” The words “United Nations” and the “UN” acronym should not be placed before the Chapter name anywhere it appears.

Common Writing Rules

- “The Seven Principles of PRME” is correct, while “7 Principles” and “PRME’s Seven Principles” are not.
- Whenever possible and appropriate, we should refer to the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) as the Global Goals.
- Dates should always be written out in the format “Day/Month/Year” (for example, 12 December 2018; rather than December 12, 2018 or 12 December, 2019); similarly, the time of day should always be written in 12-hour format (for example, 3:30 p.m. rather than 3:30pm or 15:30).
- Government should always be capitalized when referring to Member States, either individually or in aggregate (for example, “...actors from business, Government, civil society and academia”). However, when referring to local, municipal and provincial governments, or when referring to non-governmental entities, the term is not capitalized.
- The terms “Heads of State” and “Chief Executive” should always be capitalized.
- The correct punctuation is “a principles- based approach” not “principle based-approach”.
- UN Agencies, Funds and Programmes should never be used in the possessive (e.g. you should not say “the UN Global Compact’s staff” but rather “staff of the UN Global Compact”).
- Acronyms should always be spelled out in full the first time, and then only written as the acronym (in all caps) each subsequent time.
- In general, do not use an Oxford comma unless there are several “and” phrases.
- Know your dashes! The widest stroke, the em dash (—), should be used when dividing parts of a sentence to create emphasis. The mid-length stroke, the en dash (–), is typically used between dates and number ranges. The hyphen (-) should only be used when hyphenating words.
- Most words follow the British spelling with “ou” instead of just “o” (humour vs. humor); contrarily, most words use the American “z” instead of the “s” (organization vs. organisation). As a general rule, most spellings closely resemble spellings in Canadian English (it may be helpful to set your spell check accordingly).
- “Programme” is spelled with the extra “-me” on the end (as opposed to “program”), unless referring to a computer program.

Logos

To ensure that the identity maintains its authority and legitimacy, it is important to follow the guidelines for proper usage of the logo on all levels.

PRME always uses either our long or short logos. The PRME logo makes up the foundation for the rest of the brand logos and must never be altered in any form. The internal logos are strictly for use by PRME. Usage of the external logos in partnerships alongside other partner logos is to be permitted by PRME on a case-by-case basis. Please note that this type of usage always requires the approval of the PRME Secretariat.

All logos should always maintain the same ratio of height to width.

The icons are shown here in the full version with their descriptive sentence, which is ideal for reports, and a general overview version that can be used in a variety of placements. The Seven Principles and their icons should either appear on a white background in their respective colour branding, or in white on a solid colour background (preferably PRME Blue), or a section of an image that ensures the Principles are legible.

Colours

A key component of PRME is its colour palette. It is important to maintain a sense of hierarchy, balance and harmony when using the palette. The primary colour is known as “PRME Blue” which matches the primary blue in the colour palette of the UN Global Compact and therefore showcases PRME’s identity in the UN System. This colour should be used with the greatest frequency and may be used for both large areas of colour or as an accent colour.

It is essential that PRME colours, including The Seven Principles colours, are always reproduced accurately. To get the closest colour match, please ensure that the special Pantone colours are always used for visual matching. Please keep in mind that a printed colour will vary in hue and density according to the surface it is printed on. All colours are defined as Pantone, CMYK, RGB and HEX.

Typography

PRME uses the three primary typefaces of the UN Global Compact: Flama, Roboto and Lora.

Flama is the main font of PRME. It is used in social media graphics, captions, body text, body text headings, notes, etc. PRME Constituents can download the Flama font family. Roboto is used for most digital copy throughout the website. Lora can be used in print, but may also be used for highlighting text (i.e. quotes and subheadings). Roboto and Lora are web safe fonts and can be found on fonts.google.com. All weights of Flama, Roboto and Lora can be used.

Noto Sans is used for Arabic, Chinese, Georgian, Japanese, Korean and other languages that Flama and Roboto do not support.

It is recommended that strictly legal documents, such as a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU), use the Times New Roman typeface, which comes standard with all word processing programs.

Slide deck presentations may use the standard Verdana font if Flama or Roboto are not available.

SDG Branding

The Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) Branding is compatible with PRME branding and can be used to supplement. The colours, SDG icons, and SDG wheel, poster, and individual goals can all be incorporated into PRME related designs, so long as they are complimentary and not the main design.

For non-UN entities, it is required to ONLY use the non-UN entity branding of the SDGs.

SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOALS

Sub-Brands

These supplementary guidelines provide a framework for consistently expressing specific project branding that is part of the larger PRME brand. These guidelines serve as a supplement to the main PRME brand guidelines. All sub-brands include the PRME logo within them so it is not necessary to include both logos, but both logos can be included if it is appropriate.

When should a sub-brand be developed?

Sub-brands are a great opportunity to create a new identity for a specific project or help target a specific audience. Our sub-brands are an extension of the main PRME brand with their own unique identity, name, and positioning. In most instances, it is preferred to not create a sub-brand for individual projects so as to maintain a strong primary brand. However, some instances can be appropriate such as:

1. A recurring flagship event or
2. A multi-year funded project.
